Civic Center Chiller Replacement Project

Following the success of the Energy Conservation Program in 2003, Mayor Shirley Franklin created the Energy Conservation Reinvestment Account (ECRA) to fund future energy efficiency projects from a portion of the savings achieved in 2003.

For several months now, the Energy Conservation Program has been conducting energy audits of nine city facilities to identify energy efficiency opportunities. One such opportunity presented itself at the Atlanta Civic Center which has relied on original heating and cooling equipment since its construction in 1968. Over the past few weeks the Energy Conservation Program worked with the Civic Center to identify an energy efficient replacement for one of the existing chillers, which, due to its age, was in danger of imminent failure.

The attached ordinance transfers funds from the Energy Conservation Reinvestment Account to the Civic Center to fund half of the engineering study and specification that was required for this chiller replacement.
